Vascular Surgery has witnessed tremendous growth in the last two decades. This growth has been fueled by innovation; new concepts that have originated from a variety of sources, large and small. The innovators have ranged from the solitary physician with a good idea to the large engineering departments of multinational medical device and pharmaceutical companies. The VEITHsymposium has always provided a venue for the presentation of novel tools for the diagnosis and treatment of patients with vascular disease. The Innovation and Investment Summit, now in its fourth year, expands this mission. The Summit will bring innovators and investors together in an interactive setting. Short presentations will be followed by challenging discussions led by panels of clinician thought-leaders and experienced financial experts, with an audience that includes interested physicians, scientists, engineers, regulators, and individuals from the financial services industry. The overall objective of the Summit is to foster open dialogue and cross pollination of ideas among a broad spectrum of stakeholders.

Presented by:
Kenneth Ouriel, MD, MBA
Jean Bismuth, MD
Christopher Cheng, PhD
